章节摘录

The relationship between formal education and economic growth inpoor countries is widely misunderstood by economists and politicians alike. Progress in both areas is undoubtedly necessary for the social , political , and intellectual development of these and all other societies; however , the conventional view that education should be one of the very highest priorities for promoting rapid economic development in poor countries is wrong. Weare fortunate that it is , because building new educational systems there and putting enough people through them to improve economic performancewould require two or three generations. The findings of a researchinstitution have consistently shown that workers in all countries can betrained on the job to achieve radically higher productivity and , as a result , radically higher standards of living.
