《中国道教艺术》

内容概要

What is Daoist art? This is a question open for different interpretations. The Daoist arts as we define in this book refer to the artistic works with evangelic motivation and the artistic works inspired by Daoist thoughts and imaginations. The arts are a form of social thought and a reflection of social reality. As different ideas are represented in the arts, its expressions are rich and colorful. And its expressions take many forms, such as statues, paintings and dramas. Religion and arts have much in common. Like arts, religion is a reflection of social thought. Religion and arts borrow from each other and penetrate into each other. In the development of arts and religion, their mutual influence can be easily discerned.
