章节摘录

Nowadays , as job-hunting becomes more and more challenging , many people choose to continue their study after obtaining bachelors degrees. They believe that further study brings them more advantages in job markets and generates more income in the future. But others don't think so. They think that starting a career as soon as possible relieves family burden. After all , the tuition accounts for a large share of the expense of many families. Besides , they believe real-world practice brings them more edges , and expose them to many opportunities.

In my opinion , the answer varies from person to person. We should be clear about what advantages we have when hunting for a job. If you are already qualified for the job you seek for , it is not necessary to continue your study. Otherwise , staying in school might not be a bad choice.
