章节摘录

One Sunday morning, Tom and Dick went fishing together. Tom took his dog Lulu with him. The dog usually sat quietly beside them. But when he saw a small animal or a bird, he would run after it and try to catch it. Dick hated the dog because it frightened the fish. "Why do you bring your dog here?" said Dick to Tom. "Look, he is running up and down. All the fish are frightened and swim away. We must be quiet if we want to catch a fish." "You are right," answered Tom. Then he shouted at his dog, "Be quiet, Lulu." But Lulu didn't listen to him.

"Shall we go home, Dick?" said Tom. "Next time, I shall not bring him again." "Wait," said Dick. "A fish is biting my line. I can feel it." "Be careful!" said Tom. "Don't step forward, or you'll fall into the river." But it was too late. Dick was so excited that he forgot the danger. He stepped forward to pull the line and fell into the water. "Help, help! I can't swim." Dick shouted in the water. But Tom could not swim either. Just at that very moment, Lulu came out! The brave dog jumped into the water and then pulled Dick onto the bank with his teeth biting Dick's shirt. Dick was saved. He was still holding the line in his hand. On its end was a big fish.
