章节摘录

English language teaching research has attracted more and more attention from the academic circle in China due to the wide spread of English as a foreign language at different levels of education as well as a working language at many business areas in the country. It is therefore not a surprise for this conference to have witnessed the participation of over 300 EIT practitioners from all over China including Hong Kong SAR and scholars from other countries including Austria, Singapore and the United Kingdom. With the theme of Innovating English Teaching in China, the conference attracted 288 Papers which were presented at 38 Concurrent Sessions. The keynote speeches were so profound that the participants were greatly enlightened by their theories and interpretation of ELT. It is our honour that Professor Henry Widdowson, Professor Barbara Seidlhofer, Professors Li Xiaojun & Xiao Huiyun and Dr Lawrence Jun Zhang have all agreed to allow us to include their speeches in this anthology, which we believe will have a great impact on the further innovation of EIT in China. We must also acknowledge our appreciation for the 92 paper submissions after the conference, which have provided us with good quality research papers for the selection conducted by a panel of referees. Our readers may find that all the papers included here are research papers based on primary data, thanks to their contribution or the referees in achieving the standard of excellence during the selection process. Due to the limit of space, only 36 papers were selected and we believe that many other papers may appear in other publications. We have therefore provided OUF readers with an appendix listing all the titles of the presentations at the conference for their reference. The selected papers are grouped under the headings of Keynote Speeches, New Concepts on EFL Teaching & Learning, Approaches and Methods, Teaching the Skills of English, Cultural Aspects of ELT, which are trying to reflect a wide variety of research in this field of study. The following introductory sketch is an attempt to give the readers a glimpse of the selected papers and we are sure that they will be able to gain greater insight and more benefits once they go further inside. . . .
